COP29 PROPOSED PAPER: NAVIGATING POWER GRID SCARCITY IN THE AGE OF RENEWABLE ENERGY

Preserving system stability with increased penetration of renewable energy sources is a major challenge to a successful decarbonization of the energy sector.

In the light of COP29 summit in Azerbaijan, ERRA aims to give guidance to policymakers and member regulators on how policies and regulation need to adapt to support the integration of renewables energies.

The Study's purpose is to:

- Provide a snapshot of grid management issues among ERRA member countries, including Azerbaijan
- Analyse best practice for grid congestion management, via case studies and a practical regulatory toolbox
- Formulate policy and regulatory recommendations on grid management in the light of increased penetration of RES.

MAIN CONTENTS OF THE PAPER

ERRA SURVEY ON GRID SCARCITY

A snapshot of the status of grid scarcity and available and planned tools of select ERRA member countries.

CASE STUDIES ON BEST PRACTICES

Case studies on management of grid scarcity at transmission and distribution levels.

STATUS OF RENEWABLE ENERGY IN AZERBAIJAN

A snapshot of the status-quo of renewable energy deployment in Azerbaijan and the related plans.

RAP'S REGULATORY TOOLKIT

Regulatory options for national regulators, network companies and grid users to ease grid congestion.

RECOMMENDATIONS

1. How to design policies that promote reliable power systems.
2. How to effectively design incentives for improvements in managing grid scarcity.
